An Experiential Introduction to Eurythmy

A Five Week Course
Led by Jonathan Snow

What if we used our limbs as organs of perception for the movement around our body, and in the space between individuals? This course proposes an experiential and artistic exploration through Eurythmy of the dynamic forces that sustains life and shapes the world. Open to all. Please bring eurythmy or gymnastic shoes if you have them, and wear movement appropriate clothing.

From Rudolf Steiner's Lecture of Dec. 12, 1920:
"Eurythmy as we here give it cannot therefore be regarded as anything in the nature of dancing; it is a new Art, having as its instrument Man himself, and its movements are absolutely in accordance with law....Eurythmy is still at its most elementary stage; but while we realise that we are only attempting to make a beginning, we yet can affirm from association with this work that, by further development brought about either by ourselves or by others, Eurythmy will become ever more and more perfect, and will one day take up its rightful position as a young sister-art among the older and fully established ones."
